

Seyram Selase serves as the Executive Director of the Agency for Substance Abuse Prevention (ASAP), leading the charge in community health initiatives across Alabama and beyond through statewide programs and nationally recognized initiatives. His strategic leadership at ASAP earned the organization the prestigious 2023 Calhoun County Nonprofit of the Year award, underscoring his ability to develop and manage impactful prevention programs.

Seyram is the creator of the Faith-Based Support Specialist (FBSS) program, an innovative curriculum designed to equip faith leaders to address substance misuse, mental health, recovery, and community wellness. The success of FBSS led to a partnership with Harvard Divinity School, where the program was presented as part of a landmark training conference bringing together faith leaders and community partners from across the United States.

A product of the Anniston City and Talladega County School Systems, Seyram's roots in education continue to shape his lifelong commitment to community development. He is a graduate of Berea College, a Life Member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Incorporated, a 2025 graduate of the FBI Citizens Academy, and a Life Member of the FBI Citizens Academy Alumni Association (FBI-CAAA).

Seyram is also a former elected official, having proudly served as Vice Mayor of the City of Anniston from 2012 to 2016, where he championed initiatives centered on equity, civic engagement, and youth empowerment.

In addition to his role at ASAP, Seyram is the pioneering President of Cunningham Estates, where he integrates his real estate expertise with a passion for ecotherapy, environmental conservation, and historic preservation. As a licensed real estate broker in Alabama, he is committed to helping families navigate property ownership while promoting long-term community investment. Seyram's leadership is defined by innovation, collaboration, and a steadfast commitment to creating lasting positive change. He resides in Anniston, Alabama.
